Poor Intelligence

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) displayed statesman-like courage when he denounced the United States' intervention in the Dominican Republic. His attack was directed against our information agencies, rather than against President Johnson's action.

Fulbright's attack against our intelligence sources was justified. Too many times in the past our information has been inadequate.

If the CIA and the State Department can supply us with no better information, we may soon find ourselves in serious trouble.
